What is French pattern?

French pattern, also known as Tumbled French or antique pattern, is a popular layout or design style for natural stone tiles, particularly travertine. It originated in France and is characterized by a combination of different-sized tiles arranged in a repeating pattern.

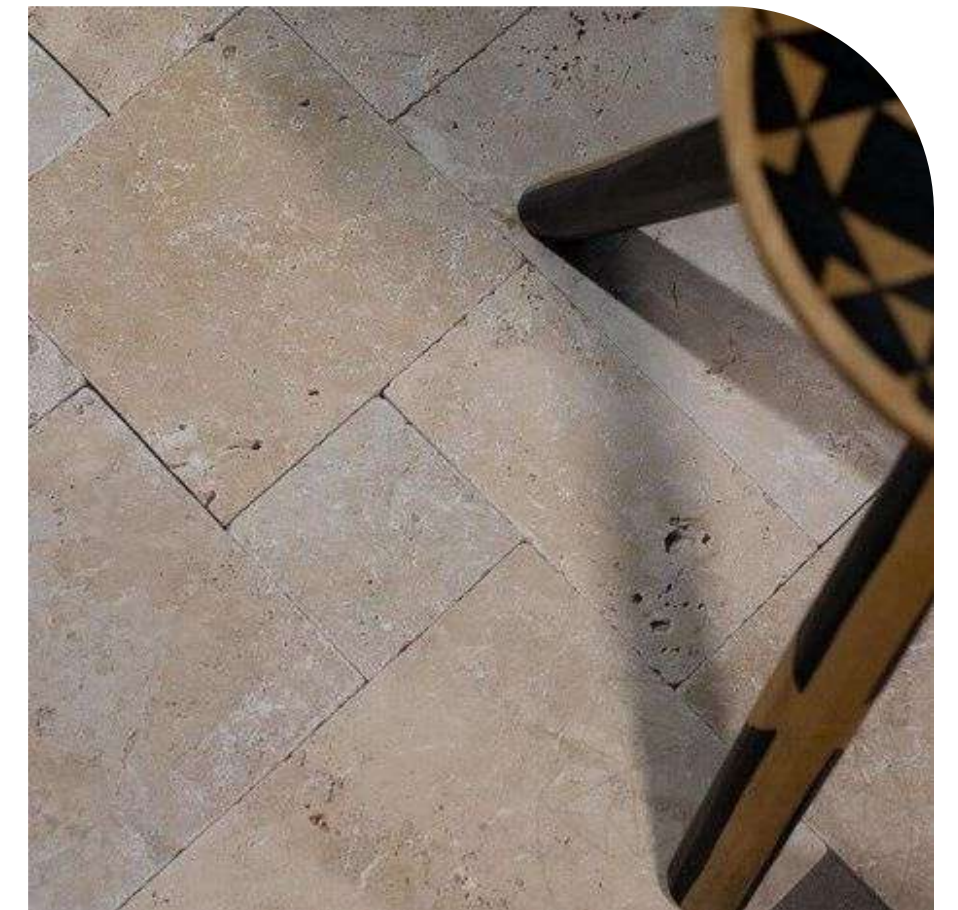

What is French pattern?

Typically, French pattern consists of four different tile sizes: a large square, a rectangular tile half the size of the square, and two smaller squares. These tiles are laid out in a way that creates a random, yet balanced appearance. The pattern is designed to mimic the look of old European stone floors, adding a touch of elegance and sophistication to any space.

French pattern uses

The versatility of the French pattern allows it to be used in various applications, including flooring, patios, walkways, and pool decks. It offers a unique and visually appealing alternative to traditional straight or diagonal tile layouts. The combination of different tile sizes creates a dynamic and interesting visual effect, enhancing the overall aesthetic of the area.

French Pattern Tiles Installation

When installing French pattern tiles, it is important to follow the specific layout instructions provided by the manufacturer or a professional installer. The tiles are typically interlocked or interlaced, and the grout lines may vary in width to maintain the desired pattern. Proper installation and regular maintenance can ensure that the French pattern remains beautiful and durable for years to come.

Silver Travertine: Tumbled French

Silver travertine tumbled French pattern refers to a specific variation of the French pattern layout using silver travertine tiles that have been tumbled. Tumbled refers to a process where the tiles are mechanically tumbled with abrasive materials to create a weathered, aged, or antique appearance.

When used in a French pattern layout, silver travertine tumbled tiles create a stunning and timeless design. The combination of different tile sizes, along with the tumbled finish, adds depth and dimension to the overall aesthetic. The variation in color and texture between the tiles further enhances the visual appeal, making it an excellent choice for both indoor and outdoor applications.

Silver Travertine Application

Silver travertine tumbled French pattern can be used in various areas, such as patios, pool decks, walkways, and interior floors. It offers a classic and elegant look that complements a wide range of design styles, from traditional to contemporary. The tumbled finish also provides a slightly textured surface, which can be beneficial for areas where slip resistance is a concern.
